FAMILY MEMBERS IN THE WARS

WORLD WARS

The title is a bit of a misnomer but Tidridge was not sure how to word it so that it gave an idea about some of the names that follow. Obviously, unless you are a history or military buff what was happening, say, in 1840, that caused a man to enlist might be a bit of a mystery.

In spite of all that it is also obvious the wider Tytheridge family has 'stepped up to the plate' [ouch, that's terrible!] when there was a need.

By way of explanation... if some family connection had been found there is a link to that family. And as usual, there is this reminder... records are not perfect nor is the writer... if you find any errors please contact him...the contact location is at the end of the page. If the family members died as the result of service you will be directed to the Roll of Honour and then to the family page, if there is one. If, you have more information please let Tidridge know.

Titheridge, Cecil Baird Navy Commander Service number J43911. Cecil was born 4 February 1900 at Portsmouth son of John and Amelia Maud Titheridge. In 1924 he married Mary Sneddon in Hendon. He died in 1973 in Gosport.

Cecil joined the Navy at 14 and was in both world wars. He is known to have served on the Diana and HMS Hood but not when it went down. In 1941 Cecil was serving on HMS Dunedin. The Dunedin left England on 8 April 1941 and went to the South Atlantic. On 24 November 1941 The Dunedin was in central Atlantic north east of Brazil when it was hit by two torpedoes fired from a German U boat. It sank within 17 minutes. The survivors spent 78 hours on floats during which time many died from their injuries and exhaustion. They were finally rescued on 27 November. Cecil was one of 67 survivors from the 486 men on HMS Dunedin.

According to the Watson Report "he behaved with great coolness, courage and confidence throughout the period on the raft. His steadiness and clear headedness were invaluable and undoubtedly gave confidence to the men".

For details of the Dunedin disaster and a picture of Cecil click here. After the war Cecil was in the Civil Service and he visited Russia and China. His work was described as "secret".
